Year End Cheer & Concerns

Most of us are looking forward to traditional or seasonal celebrations this month and anticipating the changeover to 2020. The year-end scenario is also when we look at our employment situations, whether we work for ourselves, in a corporate environment, etc. Some of us plan to hold steady or may plan changes. Of course, outsiders sometime have ideas that affect that.

On the bright side, our BWI Writing Contest offers all members pretty good odds of earning some cash (which totals $15K this year), and/or recognition, for great writing (see page 2).

Many of us are looking forward to BWI's Annual Meeting at the Miami Boat Show. That will be Thursday February 13, 2020 at 8 a.m. on the docks in front of the show (more details coming soon).

On the worry side, some states are considering legislation that would reclassify freelancers so that companies would have to hire them as staffers. Proposed legislation aims to improve benefits for certain workers in specific jobs, but the language and scope as written will put others in jeopardy. Freelancers, including writers, have ended

Lawmakers have said they would "carve out" protections for freelancers they feel shouldn't be included, but Kavin worries that would amount to the example of, "if you like your doctor you can keep your doctor." The core issue, she adds is, "It's time for an in-depth, smart, nuanced national conversation about the meaning of the term independent contractor in the Age of the Gig Economy." up on the losing side of the current equation.

California and New Jersey are states where proposals are currently being considered, but other states may float similar plans. If writers aren't in states where laws are enacted, they will likely still be affected if publishers are based there.

BWI past president Kim Kavin is actively working the issue in her home state of New Jersey and coordinating with publishers, other writer and freelance groups that recognize the damage they'll face if the bills pass. She recently penned an op-ed piece in the Washington Post which can be read here: www.washingtonpost.com/outlook/.

Also on the concern side was the recent closure of Sea and Boating World magazines, which impacts a number of our members, including me as Managing Editor of the latter. There are interested parties looking to acquire the magazines. We recognize the challenge publishers have in keeping their businesses healthy; we hope that those who carry on will consider reaching out to BWI journalists who offer a record of writing excellence.

Happy Holidays from your BWI Board of Directors.

With a December 31 deadline, BWI's Annual Writing Contest always sees a flurry of entries in the final weeks of the year. Fifteen categories are offered this year, noted nearby. Entries in all categories are welcome from digital-only or print sources.

The contest recognizes the best marine writing and imaging in the world and presents cash awards to first- ($500), second- ($300) and third-place ($200) scorers in each category. Last year, an additional 47 Certificates of Merit were awarded.

Each category requires 10 submissions to be valid and judgeable. Category popularity shifts each year; last year, top categories in number of entries were Travel, Columns and Profiles while lowest were Photography, Issues & News, and Videos. The goal of the Contest is to award all prizes in all categories. Category definitions are included in the contest brochure.

With 15 categories $15,000 in cash awards are offered. Presentation of awards will be made at the Miami Boat Show during the BWI Annual Meeting in February 2020.

All details are included in a brochure posted at www.bwi.org/downloads/BWI-Contest-19.pdf. An electronic form (www.bwi.org/bwicontest) provides the entry process.

BWI members get two free entries as a membership benefit; additional entries can be included for $25 apiece.

Member News

Chesapeake Bay Adds Weekly News to Mix

Chesapeake Bay Media announced in November that it is adding Bay Weekly, the southern Maryland-based newspaper, to its growing regional media family. Annapolis-based CBM publishes Chesapeake Bay Magazine and Bay Bulletin – a 24/7 multimedia news channel – along with several specialty destination, travel, and maritime publications. Launched in 1993, Bay Weekly is free and read by an estimated 60,000 people at 500+ locations. “We think local news is most sought-after in the media landscape, and Bay Weekly has set a good example how to maintain connections with the towns they serve,” said John Stefancik, Chesapeake Bay publisher. ### Martin Flory Adds New Client

To develop its market share and increase awareness of its newly launched North American operations, veratron US has hired Martin Flory Group. The PR firm will promote the company's line of veratron and VDO Marine sensors, controls and instrumentation. Contact Kelly Flory, info@martinflory.com.

RBFF Web Plugin Eases Registrations

Links to RBFF's Fishing License & Boat Registration Website Plugin is now on the websites of 88 brands. The tool, which brings license and registration information straight to the users of any consumer-facing website, recorded 111,000 sessions in the month of October.

Among others, Amazon has added the plugin to its site. A click directs consumers to the proper state agency pages to purchase fishing licenses and register boats, ultimately leading to more funds for conservation efforts and more links to referrals to readers and customers.
